Creating & Changing Mindsets

If rational behavior was the basis for human interaction and the mysteries of learning and development were well understood – this book wouldn't be needed. Clear strategies to assist "shifts" in attitude and behavior are included. The question, "will this change last?" plagues us every year. Here's how to impact changes within a month's time... for long-term, sustained differences!

Brain Based Teaching

Explore teaching and learning through three overarching lenses: How can I "frame" (design) the learning circumstance or activity to INVITE ALL learners, to participate? How can I design the learning experience to CAUSE learner processing – the work required for sustained learning and recall? How do I engineer tasks that create opportunities for multiple PATHWAYS (connections) to be formed for integration, application, & recall?

A Mastery Toolkit

Speaking directly to the student, this book explores the foundations of understanding, essential strategies, and learning tools to become motivated, independently engaged in the learning process, responsible for learning, and accountable for making good choices. The goal is to become a "Can Do" Student – a student who takes charge of their learning and empowers themselves in ways to be successful.

Engaging Today's Students

In "Engaging Today's Students," we have examined the research around the learner of today, effective teaching practices, and the brain sciences that link to long-term memory and recall. We have observed hundreds of classroom lessons and activities, developed by an array of practicing educators. With a deep commitment to learners and teachers, this book addresses the four essential learning components that drive student engagement.
